

You are responsible for complying with the health requirements of the countries you intend to visit. Check with your physician regarding any immunizations you may need. We strongly recommend that you visit the U.S. Department of State website (www.travel.state.gov) for general travel information. You are responsible for ensuring that all your travel documents are in order. For such passengers on a journey to, from, or with an agreed stopping place in the United States of America, the Convention(s) provide (1) that the liability of the carrier or the person carrying the passenger and his baggage is without risk, and is not liable for any damages or losses that may result from travel.

We have made arrangements for air transportation to your vacation destination via regularly scheduled certificated air carriers or other air carriers who have made special arrangements with us. This air transportation is subject to the terms and conditions of the airline. Airline schedules and airports are subject to change without notice. If the airline you have been booked to is unable to accommodate your travel, we may use the services of another airline at our discretion, without liability on our part. In the event of an airline overbooking, we will make every effort to accommodate you on the next available flight, on another airline, if available. You will be responsible for the difference in cost, if any.

18. HAZARDOUS MATERIALS RESTRICTIONS AND INSECTICIDE NOTICE

The U.S. government has established hazardous materials regulations which are applicable to all air transportation within the United States. These regulations are designed to minimize the risk to health. A passenger must notify the airline at least 48 hours before departure if any hazardous materials are to be transported with the passenger. In addition, the passenger must provide the airline with a copy of the hazardous materials label or hazardous materials statement. In the event of a spill or other emergency, the airline may require you to request the materials at the airport. If you are unable to do so, the airline may request that you return to the airport to ensure the materials are removed. If this occurs, the airline will arrange for you to be transported to the nearest airport, and you will be responsible for any transportation costs.

We strongly recommend that you visit the U.S. Department of State website (www.travel.state.gov) for general travel information.
